PPC Group received significant distinctions in seven categories in 2025 as well, in the annual "Emerging EMEA Executive Team" survey conducted by the internationally recognized organization Extel, which specializes in data analysis and the provision of information to the global investment community.

PPC Group's Chairman & CEO, Georgios Stassis, was ranked first in the Best CEO category for the third consecutive year. At the same time, the Group Chief Financial Officer, Konstantinos Alexandridis, and the Head of Investor Relations, Ioannis Stefos, achieved second and first place in the Best CFO and Best IR Professional categories, respectively. In addition, PPC Group won first prize in the Best IR Team category and second place in the Best Investor/Analyst Event, Best IR Program, and Best ESG Program categories, while also being included among the Most Honored Companies based on a combination of various criteria.

The above distinctions in the "Emerging EMEA Executive Team" survey in the Utilities sector reflect the ongoing transformation of PPC, driven by a clear vision to become a modern Powertech Group with a strong presence in Southeastern Europe. They are the result of our commitment to continuous improvement and unwavering focus on the Group's strategic plan. At the same time, they recognize the vital contribution of the Investor Relations Division, which, by consistently meeting the evaluation's high standards, has strengthened PPC's reputation and standing within the global investment community.

This year's "Emerging EMEA Executive Team" survey by Extel included participation from more than 260 professionals representing 462 international financial services firms. Over 600 executives and 300 companies from Emerging EMEA markets were nominated for distinction, based on criteria such as credibility, communication, financial management, capital allocation, and the quality of their relationships with the investment community.
